Mesa Verde Top Attraction of Magic '4 Corners' Tour

FINE NEW HIGHWAYS have opened up the scenic Four Corners area, which is the ultimate in scenic splendor.
Highlights are Monument Valley, Mesa Verde National Park, the famous cliff dwellings, Shiprock, the Great Sand Dunes, the San Juan River, three national monuments, colorful Indian trading posts, uranium, oil and natural gas have brought prosperity to this homeland of the Navajos, and boom-town growth to Farmington and Aztec in New Mexico, and Durango and Cortez in Colorado.

Editor's Note: This is the 34th in a series of suggested highway tour maps which the Hope Star is publishing weekly. This is excellent material to cut out and paste up in a scrapbook for future reference when planning your vacation trip.

By EDWARD COLLIER

Monument Valley, seen but by few Americans, is the ultimate in scenic splendor.

Here earth and sky merge in a blaze of red and vivid blue. At dawn the sheer sandstone monoliths and pinnacles that tower up from the flat valley floor are bathed in rosy aure and seem to blend into eternity. As the sun climbs high, the buttes take on an angry fire. Sunset brings purple majesty. This is the prize of a Magic Circle trip around the Four Corners area, where Utah, Arizona, Colorado and New Mexico meet at one common point. Elsewhere in this awesome wilderness home of the Navajos, the caprices of nature and the passage of centuries are recorded in flamboyant natural bridges, cliff dwellings of ancient Indian cultures, color canyons that have been eroding since the beginning of time.

The impetus that suddenly has brought good roads to open up this mysterious Four Corners land started with the finding of uranium; now extensive oil and natural gas discoveries, plus development of vast irrigation projects, are electrifying the area.

We started our Magic Circle tour of the Four Corners — with Monument Valley as the exciting major objective — from Farmington, New Mexico. Not long ago this was a quiet farming community. In 1959 it is a boom town where stunning buildings of ultramodern or Pueblo Indian design seem to be racing each other to completion. Wide divided streets are being carved out of fields so rapidly that last summer I saw temporary signs, such as "New Car Boulevard," painted on pieces of wood and hung by wires from the lamp standards in the center traffic islands. The handsome new plant of the Daily Times had to be doubled in size after but 18 months.

Colorful Street Scene

The street scene in Farmington is representative of the dynamic economy of this new-old country; eastern businessmen, attache cases in hand, rub shoulders with cowboys; yellow-helmeted men from the area's oil and natural gas fields are part of the crowd that includes Indian women from the nearby reservations, strolling down the sidewalks clothed in dignity and the traditional high-necked velvet jackets and long, swathe, ballroom-length skirts of bright purple, green, red or blue satin.

Plan to leave Farmington in the early morning while the heat is still soft on the lush green farming valley of the San Juan River, couched between desert hills. Occasionally, as you drive westward on U.S. 540 along the ribbon of highway-like highway, you will observe gleaming new oil storage tanks or the giant pipe of a natural gas line that account for the new prosperity. It is not uncommon to see an Indian girl in a bright red and purple dress sitting motionless on top of a butte, colored hulloak and watching the automobiles rush by.

Always homing in on the distance is Shiprock, sentinel of the Four Corners, that for centuries has been sacred to the Navajos. A guiding beacon to the Spanish conquistadors, pioneer cowboys and now the uranium miners, oil explorers, tourists.

There is a thrill of identification when you first see Shiprock, sometimes purple, other times orange, depending on the sun. The feeling comes not only from remembered photographs of the mountain that rises 1,644 feet up from the desert shelf, but also from the deeply imbedded Indian legend that this was the great ship that brought their ancestors to America and then turned to stone.

Fantasy Land

At the little town of Shiprock you turn north (U.S. 666) past the beautiful an dutilitarian boarding school campus for Navajo children. Every mile of the gun-barrel highway across the state line and into Colorado brings vistas of unbelievable rock shapes and formations — panoramas of ever-different silhouettes. The clear desert air completely unbridles your imagination. You identify far-distant buttes (that trick you into thinking they are close at hand): giant teapots, chimneys, turreted castles, exotic moonscapes, goblins, mammoth and hills and fortresses of the gods.

The affluence of the Four Corners area again is on display in Cortez, Colorado, once a sleepy little village that motorists drove through on their way to Mesa Verde National Park. Today Cortez is having severe growing pains. Construction is under way all over town on new buildings, motels with swimming pools, wide streets, residential areas and modern schools. The Magic Circle serves west (U.S. 160) from Cortez to the Utah state line through a photogenic farming empire. Gentle rolling fields are broken by a few arroyos, the rich red soil contrasting with the green rows of corn, sugar beets, pinto beans and the yellow squash where winter wheat has ripened. Interspersed between these ranches are stately juniper trees and clumps of gray-green sagebrush growing to a prodigious size.

At Monticello, where the uranium discovery excitement is just now subsiding, you turn south (Utah 47). Your first thrilling view of Monument Valley — 70 miles to the south — can be seen shortly after leaving Blanding, a relaxed and friendly town where frequent informal rendezvous are held in a juniper-bordered pasture.

Historic Spot

South from Blanding the hard-surfaced road suddenly drops down through a narrow canyon to the trading post at Bluff, Utah. Every traveler stops to drink and fill his water bag from a big spring at the foot of the two towering red monoliths, and to read the bronze plaque set in a boulder. It was from this spot that 25 conquistadors of southwest Indian communities began their historic six-month migration of hardship and death in 1679, via the Hole-in-the-Rock short cut across the Colorado River.

Ten miles south from Bluff the road phases down a steep grade into one of the most incredibly fiery lands and towns ever seen. The PSC order said the firm plans to use the money to finance its 1959 expansion program. Funds are to be borrowed for a three-year period at a maximum interest rate of 5 1/2 per cent.

Heiress Admits Kidnap Story Was a Hoax

CHICAGO (AP) — A New Jersey socialite heiress has admitted her story of being kidnapped from the Newark airport by two men, driven to Chicago and then released because she was "too hot" to keep was a myth.

Pretty Jacqueline Gay Hart, 21, broke down Friday under the gentle questioning of her father, Ralph A. Hart, executive vice president of the Colgate-Palmolive Co., and an FBI agent. After confessing the hoax, Miss Hart said she did not remember what had happened since she vanished from the New Jersey airport Tuesday night.

The FBI said it was checking all phases of Miss Hart's story which unfolded after she appeared, screaming and crying, "Help me! help me!" beside a police cruiser in downtown Grand Park early Friday.

Authorities sent out a broadcast describing the 1 carat diamond ring, an emerald ring, a brooch and a bracelet which she said the men stripped from her. At the outset, the FBI and police were skeptical of the girl's story of being seized, blindfolded and gagged, tossed in the trunk of a car under a blanket and driven by two abductors to Chicago and then released in the lakefront park.

Police said Miss Hart's smart gray tweed dress, white sweater, black shoes and sheer stockings failed to show any of the wear and tear which an ordeal such as she described would have inflicted. And her one bruise — on her left arm — failed to tally with her account of being struck in the mouth by one of her captors after he locked her in the bathroom of an unidentified house in the Chicago area before her release.

Hart said his daughter is suffering from nervous exhaustion and is under a physician's care somewhere in Chicago. He said he did not know where they would return to their Short Hills, N.J., home along with Miss Hart's fiancé, Stanley Gaines, 25, of Fayetteville, W.Va., who flew in from New Jersey with Hart Friday.

How Miss Hart, who is to marry Gaines Aug. 20, came to Chicago and if she came alone remained a mystery.

Few Airliners in Emergency Landings

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Several airlines managed successful emergency landings at various airports across the country Thursday after developing troubles that could have caused serious accidents.

Two of the incidents were at New York's Idlewild Airport. Another involved a plane with smoking engines at Indianapolis, and the other was a plane with damage landing gear at Denver.

Landing gears seemed to present the most frequent difficulties. An American Airlines Boeing 707 jetliner, with landing gear trouble, made an emergency landing at Tucson, Ariz., Wednesday night. Other Boeing jetliners had been involved in landing gear mishaps at Idlewild Saturday night and also the previous Saturday night.

It was Idlewild's third mishap in two days Thursday when a four-engine TWA Super Constellation with 51 persons aboard came in with one engine out of operation. Earlier in the day, an Air Force cargo plane made an emergency landing after the pilot reported possible fire and smoke. There was no fire.

In Indianapolis, another TWA plane landed safely with two engines smoking from an oil leak. In Denver, a chartered plane of Miami Airlines was badly damaged when a portion of the landing gear gave way in landing at Love's Air Force Base.

No one was injured in any of the landings.

PSC Okays Loan for Western Gas

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — The state Public Service Commission today approved a one million dollar loan for Arkansas Western Gas Co. of Fayetteville.

The PSC order said the firm plans to use the money to finance its 1959 expansion program. Funds are to be borrowed for a three-year period at a maximum interest rate of 5 1/2 per cent.

Governor Against Federal Tax Hike

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Gov. Orval E. Faubus today notified the Arkansas congressional delegation of his opposition to any increase in the gasoline tax on a federal level.

In telegrams to Arkansas' two senators and six representatives, Faubus said this state is having difficulty in matching federal road funds at present.

The telegrams said in part: "Any increase in the gasoline tax on the federal level will merely throw out of balance the ratio of state funds as compared to federal funds and will still further deprive the state of Arkansas of an opportunity to obtain the needed revenue for highway construction on the state and local level."

Faubus added that he was convinced the people of Arkansas overwhelmingly oppose any federal gasoline tax boost.

Big Increase in Polio Cases Over the U. S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Paralytic polio cases increased by 50 per cent last week to a 1959 weekly high of 166. They ran more than three times the number listed for the comparable 1958 week.

The Public Health Service today said the states reported a total of 257 polio cases during the week ended July 18.

This compares with a revised total of 178 polio cases for the week ended July 11 this year, 110 of them paralytic.

In the week ended July 19, 1958, there were 52 paralytic cases among 123 polio cases listed. In the comparative 1957 week there were 252 cases, 50 of them paralytic.

Last week's totals were the highest for the 28th week of the year since 1956, when 277 paralytic cases were listed among 529 polio cases reported.

From Jan. 1 through July 18 there had been 956 paralytic cases, compared with 437 in the similar 1958 period and 1,500 in 1955, the year Salk polio vaccine was introduced.

Almost half of last week's paralytic cases occurred in four states: Missouri 20, Texas 26, Alabama 15 and Tennessee 12. The Tennessee figure represented a sudden increase, the service said, as the state listed only three paralytic cases in the preceding week.

Texas reported the most polio cases, 34. Next came Missouri with 32 and Iowa with 21.

There was a general increase in polio cases last week in all areas of the nation except the west south central states of Arkansas, Louisiana, Oklahoma and Texas, the service said.

It added that four paralytic cases in Connecticut and Massachusetts were the first reported from any New England states since May 30.

West Virginia, Alabama and Oregon each reported one polio death. Alabama previously had reported three. There have been six polio deaths in Kansas City, Mo.

In line with its urging that everybody under 10 take the recommended three shots of Salk vaccine, the service said manufacturers of the vaccine shipped 2,397,352 doses to U.S. communities during the week ended July 18 and exported 381,337 doses.

Unshipped vaccine totaled 3,261,115 doses out of which this will be used to fill orders already on hand.

Nations Best Secretary Is Picked

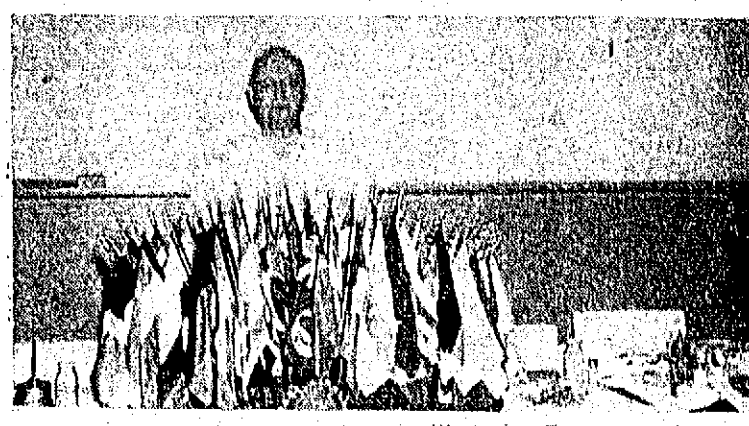

By CHRIS MACGILL
MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The nation's newly selected Secretary of the Year came here with the conviction she didn't have a chance to win that honor.

"I was told I had two strikes against me because I came from New York," said blonde 49-year-old Alicia Cogan.

The widowed mother of three grown children was crowned as the country's top secretary Thursday over five other finalists at the 14th annual convention of the National Secretaries Assn.

Mrs. Cogan, who says loyalty and thorough knowledge of typing, shorthand and filing are the prime requirements for a good office aide, is secretary to Edgar J. Buttenheim, chairman of the board of the Buttenheim Publishing Corp., New York. She has held the post for 17 years.

Gov. Lawrence, personal secretary to Gov. G. Mennen Williams of Michigan, was runner-up. Third place went to Agnes Brown of Indianapolis, secretary to the president of the American States Insurance Co.

CHARTER MEMBER Ed McCorkle addresses the Rotary Club for the 41st time.

Ed McCorkle, only remaining charter member of the Hope Rotary Club, presented his 41st program at Friday's meeting in the Diamond Cafe.

Mr. McCorkle gave a brief history of his career as a printer and newspaper man starting in the year 1899. While editor of the "Star of Hope" Mr. McCorkle scooped all of the newspapers in Arkansas on news of the 1896 earthquake and fire which destroyed most of San Francisco. He said that the AP wires were down as a result of the fire, but that his news came in through a direct wire to Taylor's Bucket Shop from Oakland, California.

He also mentioned his early membership with the AP Wire Service and how in 1921, he sent the news of the Hempstead County tornado disaster out over the wires so the rest of the world got the news.

Guests at the meeting were Fred Miller from Texarkana and Richard Bruner from Dallas.

Jaycees Fastest Grown Men's Organization in World and There Are Reasons for This

By MARY ANITA LASETER

At the recent Hope Jaycee-Jayette installation banquet some facts about the fastest growing young men's organization in the world were found on the pretty place mat at each setting.

In case you were not there, or did not have the time to read the information, or do not already know the facts, here is what the yellow and blue words and picture told me.

First, let's examine why the United States Junior Chamber of Commerce is such a fast growing organization. (After all, the fastest anything in the world today bears closer scrutiny.) As for the Jaycees, the reason is due to a dynamic leadership training through civic betterment and an age limit of 21 through 35 years.

Though the organization is now found in 84 free nations on six continents, its origin was very close to home — in St. Louis, Mo. ("Only six continents? Well, maybe penguins wouldn't make very good members, anyway.")

The United States Junior Chamber of Commerce was founded June 22, 1920, in St. Louis, Mo., by Henry Giessemer. To illustrate the growth to which we referred earlier, the group now has 3,500 chapters and 200,000 individual members. It is affiliated with 1,700 chapters throughout the world.

The headquarters for the U. S. Jaycees is located in Tulsa, Okla., in a beautiful edifice called the Jaycee War Memorial Building. It was dedicated in August of 1951. Founded in St. Louis with headquarters now in Tulsa, no wonder people in our part of the country feel a special closeness to the Jaycee organization.

No organization can truly grow and prosper unless it is built on the solid foundation of Christian principles. Thus, we have the Jaycee Creed.

"That faith in God gives meaning and purpose to human life;
"That the brotherhood of man transcends the sovereignty of nations;
"That economic justice can best be won by free men through free enterprise;
"That government should be of laws rather than of men;
"That earth's great treasure lies in human personality;
"And that service to humanity is the best work of life."

Faubus Attend Uncle's Funeral

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Gov. Orval E. Faubus today cancelled a speech to the Arkansas American Legion convention at El Dorado to attend the funeral of an uncle, William Joslin, 70, of Combs, Madison County.

Joslin, a brother of the governor's late mother and last Saturday. The funeral was delayed awaiting the arrival of relatives from the West Coast.

Camden Also Seeks Shumaker Land

CAMDEN, Ark. (AP) — The Camden Chamber of Commerce has protested to the federal government against a proposed to give 4,700 acres at the Camden Shumaker Naval Airman Training Center to the Camden Baptist College.

The Arkansas Navy Department took over the land, which has been declared surplus and used in forestry experiments.

In a letter to the secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, the Camden Chamber of Commerce charged the proposal was a device to obtain land for college revenue purposes.

Sec. Herter May Propose Recess In Berlin Crisis

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

GENEVA (AP) — Secretary of State Christian A. Herter may propose next week a long recess of the Big Four conference unless the Soviet Union softens her terms for easing the Berlin crisis. But he chances both Western and Soviet opposition.

As the foreign ministers' conference went into its ninth week, the Allies were divided over whether their talks with the Soviet Union are progressing. Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko has been talking about the need to keep seeking a Berlin settlement formula.

The parity was in recess today with only Gromyko expected to remain here throughout the week end.

Herter was expected to return here tonight after a flying good-bye visit to West Berlin, his first visit to the divided city since becoming secretary of state. Britain's Foreign Secretary Selwyn Lloyd went to London for consultation while Foreign Minister Maurice Couve de Murville of France was on a trip to Brussels and Paris.

The next meeting is set for late Monday, a secret session at Lloyd's residence. Herter reportedly hopes to get some indication at that time whether there is any chance that Gromyko will give way on the key issue — his proposal for creation of a committee of East and West Germans to negotiate on a German peace settlement.

The West repeatedly has rejected this demand. Gromyko has been insisting in demanding its acceptance as the price for his agreement to a Berlin truce. The Western ministers say they will never agree to any new machinery granting Communist East Germany equality with West Germany.

Group Okays Transfer of Cotton Acres

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Agriculture Committee today approved a bill to permit transfer of unused cotton acreage allotments to other farmers within a county or state.

The bill, supported by most of the cotton industry, was approved by a voice vote in the committee. It is expected to be sent to the House for action within a week or 10 days.

Sponsored by committee Chairman Harold Colby (D-NC), the bill would require that a farmer holding a cotton acreage allotment to one of three things: (1) Plant it, (2) voluntarily release it to maintain the acreage history for his farm, or (3) forfeit it to other farmers wanting to plant it.

The committee had heard testimony that some farmers were able to retain cotton acreage allotments even though they did not grow cotton on them every year.

The legislation has the backing of the Agriculture Department. Under the bill, a cotton farmer could maintain the cotton acreage history for his farm and for the county and state by planting 75 per cent or more of the allotment one year out of each three-year period.

Brazil to Act Against Birrell

RIO DE JANEIRO (AP) — Police said today they are starting legal steps at once to expel Lowell M. Birrell from Brazil. The 32-year-old U.S. attorney is wanted in New York on an indictment alleging a 14-million-dollar stock fraud.

Birrell was arrested Thursday night in the fashionable Copacabana Beach area. Police accused him of entering Brazil with false documents. They said he had three passports — two U.S. and one Canadian.

Birrell cannot be extradited from Brazil on the New York indictment because the United States and Brazil have no extradition treaty — a situation that has made this country a favorite haven for North Americans accused of crimes.

Murrow Applies for Reserve Commission

NEW YORK (AP) — Television commentator Edward R. Murrow has applied for a commission in the U.S. Naval Reserve.

The Navy said Thursday that Murrow applied to serve in the reserve commission field. It was reported that if the commission is granted, Murrow could have the rank of rear admiral.

Murrow, 51, said he has no radio or television training or interest now that are related to the Navy. He is on a leave of absence from the Columbia Broadcasting System, although he plans to do two TV documentaries next year and continue to appear on the "Small World" program.

Big Overcoat Fashion for Coming Fall

By SUE CARDOZO

FLORENCE, Italy (AP)—The big belted overcoat is the pot of Italian fashion collections for the coming fall and winter.

The eight days of showings in Rome and Florence ended Thursday night. The couturiers joined in a buckle up, muffle up refrain. Heavy muted tweeds were fashioned into a cape-back silhouette, bulky and round-shouldered with deep low-set sleeves taping the wrists.

Only Simonetta avoided collars, and she used ample stoles.

The Italian collections on the whole were sedate, tailored and cautious. Their frivolity was restricted to fur trimmings, chunky necklaces and an occasional flounce.

Emilio Schuberth was an exception. As usual, he added frills at every opportunity. Dark colors and conservative fabrics dominated daytime clothes. But lame (pronounced lah-may), embossed satin and uncrusted lace ran riot at night.

Suits and dresses generally were straight and slim, with hemlines below the knees. Tunic tops came back, both fitted and loose. Suit jackets tended to hug the hips. The waistline wandered slightly, mostly south. Hemlines frequently were doubled by the prevalent use of redingotes, middie and coats slightly shorter than the skirts beneath.

The collections of two designers under 30 were outstanding. Roberto Capucci showed voluminous evening coats and trim tunics. Patrick de Barenzon, a French-trained Frenchman showing for the second time in Rome, scored with low-slung trench coats and imaginative detail.

Other highlights of the Italian pageant of style were Irene Gallicini's Trompel l'oeil suits. Fabiani's girled tweed ponchos, and the knitted silks seen among the Florence boutique offerings.

DOROTHY DIX

The Thought of Food May Help Overweight

Dear Dorothy Dix: I am fat—about 60 pounds overweight. I've gone on over so many diets on my own and under a doctor's care I lose weight only to gain twice as much back. My doctor advised me to watch my diet but not worry about my weight. He seemed to think that eight-oz. causes a change in appetite and makes a person's mind dwell on the subject of food. He advised me to eat sensibly, rest sensibly and maintain a system. This I've done but have gained weight, look fat and feel fine. Everyone offers suggestions and I think they should mind their own business. We fat people know how we look. We don't like it but we seem to be stuck with the problem. I sincerely believe there is to much dwelling on overweight. The power of suggestion is not always good. It often causes people to become defiant and say, "What's the use?" How about advising people to give us a chance? Don't ridicule us. Don't humiliate us. Be gracious and tell us how to think of things other than food, fat and overweight. A dying-to-lose Reader.

Dear Lady: The last thing in the world I would do is humiliate or ridicule you. To those who have it, the problem of overweight is a serious, frustrating one that is not understood by the slender of willowy people. The naturally slender should thank their lucky stars and be a little compassionate toward their less fortunate friends. The only way to combat overweight is to put yourself in the hands of a good doctor and faithfully follow his advice, having frequent, regular check-ups. Perhaps you're trying too hard to ingrain to avoid the thought of food to encourage it, since this seems to be your favorite subject. Get a "Stop Dieting" Start Losing!" by Ruth West (E. P. Dutton & Co., Inc.) or "Eat Well and Stay Well" by Dr. Ancel Keys and Margaret Keys (Doubleday & Co., Inc.). Follow these low calorie recipes and develop a whole new field of cookery. Most of the recipes are simple; some are complicated. By tackling the not-so-lazy ones you'll acquire an interest in these dishes and be proud of serving attractive, safe and sane menus. This will be a diversion of the mind. Read all you can about good nutrition and you will really find yourself turning to good food that reduces. Let me hear from you again and next time include your name and address, please.

Dear Dorothy Dix: My brother, Bert, is a sober, hard-working man. He had been going with a girl for several years when she suddenly married a man who was a very recent acquaintance. This man has turned out to be an alcoholic and we doubt if the marriage will last. If the girl leaves her husband, should my brother take her back?—Juliana

Dear Juliana: This is such a big "if" that it doesn't even rate consideration. The girl undoubtedly just got sick and tired waiting "several years" for your brother to make up his mind. Since she has made no indication about the outcome of the marriage, let's assume that she believes in the sanctity of marriage vows and will do her best to cope with her personal problems. Your brother has been written out of the script, see that he retires gracefully.

Dear Dorothy Dix: Recently I had my hair bleached a platinum shade of blonde. Since then my friend refuses to be seen with me in public. What can I do to regain his affection?—Blondie

Dear Blondie: One of life's eternal mysteries is this: why do men admire synthetic blonde hair in everybody but their wives and sweethearts? You might have tried working your hair into a light wash and, finally, the whole works. However, since your beauty objects, the only thing you can do is go back to natural.

Send your problem to DOROTHY DIX, care of the newspaper, stamped, self-addressed envelope and address her in care of this newspaper.

More Wonderlands
The black-top ends here at the Arizona border, and a graded dirt road takes you through more of the Monument Valley wonderland. Kayenta is among the most fascinating of the Indian trading posts. A study between the old and new, the women in their long-sleeved jackets and long, jewel-colored skirts are in vivid contrast to the Navajo school girls listening to the rock-and-roll from the cafe juke box and dressed like teen-agers in any other part of America.

Monthly Meeting
Ten members and Rev. and Mrs. J. C. Jordan met on Monday night at the First Christian Church for the monthly supper meeting of the Business Women's Fellowship.

The program and business meeting opened with the group singing the theme song and prayer by Mrs. B. C. Stivers. Mrs. Alfred Cummings had charge of the program and gave the devotional from Psalms 117.

"Work of the Town and Country" was the topic of the mission speakers, told of the charges in the church from its beginning to the present time. The leader illustrated her talk with three puppets representing the city, county and village church. The meeting closed with the Missionary Benediction. Mrs. Ray Pouchey will be the leader at the August meeting.

Mrs. L. L. Buchanan was the Monday guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. V. I. Wortham in Garrettsville, Ohio.

Mrs. O. G. Hirst and Mrs. C. O. McSwain are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. John Beyer and Mr. and Mrs. Joe Celeja in Houston, Tex.

Mrs. J. B. Weller, Joan and Leslie have returned to Houston, Texas after a visit with Mrs. Mildred Dawson and Mrs. Fannie Newth.

ing and garage facilities in the town of Mexican Hat. From here start a number of safe but thrilling boat trips down through the Great Goose Necks of the San Juan and into spectacular Glen Canyon, where this stream merges with the Colorado near famed Rainbow Bridge.

From Mexican Hat there is a new bridge across the San Juan gorge, and an excellent black-topped highway, just completed last summer, to the Arizona border that traverses the grandeur of Monument Valley. The road takes you within a few hundred feet of several of the mighty, maroon-colored spires and buttes that jut up from the orange-hued floor of the low, flat valley.

Land of Phantasy
Their names are intriguing: Totem Pole, Rooster Rock, the Three Sisters, the Goblins, the Mittens, Eye of the Gods—facing the latter is a formation that I call "Bunny Rabbit-With-His-Paws-Up."

Another we dubbed "Preacher in the Pulpit." Apparently, almost every one of the old-timers named the various monoliths according to his personal fancy. We were told that National Geographic Magazine had sent a four-man expedition to climb the Totem Pole, and they measured it to be 88 feet high.

Both man and his color camera are dwarfed in this vast, silent land that belongs to the proud Navajos. Nameless little dirt roads wander off from the main highways; some will take you past the bases of the giant palisades and sky-piercing pinnacles. If negotiated slowly, these byways are passable for the first few miles—but be sure of your spare tire and gasoline supply and that your water bug is full. The chances are that the only one you will see will be an Indian tending his flock.

Tours to the more remote monoliths, hidden canyons, and mesas where you can see Navajo hogans and farms are conducted daily, and specially equipped jeeps from Gouldings Trading Post, where there is a modern new air conditioned lodge set against the sheer wall of a chocolate-red cliff (open March 15 to November 15).

Best of the original gateways to Mesa Verde was Durango, Colorado. This attractive little city is today booming like Farmington. The dynamic property is on display with its spectacular golf course that overlooks the city and a big new municipal swimming pool, both designed for tourist use. On another mesa top above Durango is the brand new Fort Lewis A & M College campus, a modern symphony of native stone, bright panels and walls of glass to offer the student scenic inspiration. The lid is pried off the first week in August at the annual Spanish Trails Fiesta, highlighted by a big-time rodeo, Indians, parades and square dancing.

South across the New Mexico line to the once quiet, isolated town of Aztec, now part of the oil and natural gas area. Just outside of town on the road to Farmington is Aztec Ruins National Monument, a fascinating study of the architecture of the ancient pueblo Indians. Largest of the excavated ruins is a five-story, 500-room structure which was built in stages, beginning around the year 1100. Most fascinating to me, as it was to the rest of the visitors, was the Great Kiva, a moody, dark, semi-underground ceremonial chamber 48 feet in diameter, which has been completely restored.

Tops among the side trips that you should take it time allows, is a 77-mile circle tour that leads off the Monument Valley Road (Utah 47) just below the town of Blanding, to Natural Bridges National Monument. The road comes back in just before you reach Mexican Hat. Largest and most majestic of these three red-brown, nature created spans is Sipapu Bridge—its edges of the cliff. In spring the bottom of the canyon is splashed by the pink of blooming each trees; in fall the gold and crimson foliage adds to the startling effect.

This is the ancestral stronghold of the Navajo tribe: before them pueblo cliff-dweller Indians built their abodes in shallow caves or apertures in the sides of the canyon walls. Most striking of these is White House Ruin, so named because one side of this structure was plastered with white clay. Four different overlook points provide thrilling views down into the gorge.

The National Park Service maintains an attractive public campground at Canyon de Chelly. There also is a little cafe. Guest accommodations are excellent but limited at Thunderbird Ranch, where auto and pack trips with Indian guides can be scheduled into the canyon.

The roads south from Chinle and then east to the New Mexico state line have been newly black-topped. There is a rewarding three-mile side trip here to Window Rock, Navajo seat of government. Here the tribal leaders meet in a well-appointed eight sided building their discussions and decisions are carried by short-wave radio to their people throughout the Four Corners country. The beautiful and imaginative rugs and the silver and turquoise jewelry for which the Navajos are famous are on sale in the crafts building.

From Window Rock it is only a few miles south to Gallup on transcontinental U. S. 66, which will take you to Arizona or California to the west, or to Albuquerque, Oklahoma City, Tulsa, St. Louis to the east.

With the recent advent of good roads into the Four Corners country there are now other interesting routes by which you can reach Monument Valley, as shown on the Magic Circle map.

For years only Mesa Verde National Park was well known and accessible. Thousands flocked here each year to see the magnificent and well-preserved cliff dwellings of race that disappeared without trace some 700 years ago. Such ruins as Cliff Palace and Spruce Tree House, tucked into walls of the high, pinion-studded mesa, continue to be top attractions. As you drive along the perfectly-engineered highway that leads to the park headquarters, museum and lodges, you have frequent and breathtaking views of multi-hued Montezuma Valley, 2,000 feet below, a rich farming empire with the blue La Sal Mountains in Utah as a backdrop.

Coach Tatum of North Carolina Dies

By NOEL YANCEY

Owen Blanchard could see the pale face in the moonlight as she descended the steps down the cliff. For a moment he waited, with the rock poised until she was in a shot beneath him.

So intent was he on what he was doing that he heard no sound behind him. Then, just as he was about to release the rock, a metal rod was suddenly pressed firmly against the small of his back.

It almost caused him to drop the rock, but not quite, for the voice that came from behind him made him grasp it more firmly.

It was the voice of Casey Paige. "Don't let that rock go, Mr. Blanchard."

Blanchard stood like a statue. "What do you mean?" he said, trying to keep his voice down. The rock in his hand reflected the beam of a flashlight.

"If you let it fall, you'll go over the edge of the cliff after it." Casey's voice was soft, but there was a deadly meaning behind it.

The rod pressed more firmly into the middle of Blanchard's back for emphasis.

Blanchard turned and let the rock fall from his hands to the ground at his feet. He faced Casey.

Constantly Maynor's flashlight blinded him.

The old man was seized roughly and pulled away from the cliff's edge.

Casey hurried to the top of the steps.

"Darling," he called, "Diane Come back. I'm up here."

He heard her cry of surprise and joy and he was waiting with both arms outstretched to help her up, and then enfold her tenderly.

Later, Casey carried Erna in those same arms, with Diane beside him and they returned to the cottage where Diane put the child to bed. The doctor would arrive soon, but Erna was no longer feverish and was showing signs of awakening.

"The constable was waiting for me when I returned from Boston," Casey said. "He flagged me down and told me what happened. We got here as fast as we could and when you weren't at the cottage, we guessed that you were up here."

We climbed the cliff stairway and we found the aluminum rod sticking out of Libby's grave. About that time, Owen Blanchard came out of the house to wait for you.

"Be generous with him," Diane said.

"After he was about to kill you?"

"I'm sure he was desperate. I know how that feels, what it does to you. He's an old man and he's had a great deal of sorrow. I hated him, Casey, but that isn't good. It's not good to hate anyone. Do what you can for him."

"Yes," he said, "I'll do whatever I can. What about the little girl?"

She walked over to him and put her arms around his neck and looked up at him earnestly.

"Casey, is there any way we can bring her up? Adopt her, mean?"

Casey kissed her.

"With Owen Blanchard's permission we could," he said. "He's her nearest of kin and therefore her legal guardian. Only kin, as far as we know. I have a subtle hunch that he wouldn't object. He was just a mistaken old man, who loved his son too much and got over his head into trouble. But Blanchard is genuinely sorry about the whole thing and so we want what's best for the little girl. Things happened just about as you suspected by the way. Perhaps Libby's body will be recovered one of these days."

Diane shook her head and moved back away from her husband. "Do you think I'd be good for the little girl, Casey? I know she'd be good for me."

He nodded. "Erna would have love and tenderness, all the understanding a child needs. She wouldn't be our own flesh and blood, but the difference would be very small. We'd love her as if she were."

"Please ask Mr. Blanchard. Beg him."

He drew her back to him with a broad grin.

"He already has asked us to take care of her. We didn't have to ask him. And when you went upstairs to get the child he did the begging."

She drew back. "Why didn't you tell me, Casey?"

"I wanted to hear you say you wanted her. I wanted you to be sure."

She took his hand, led him toward the bedroom.

"Did you ever watch a little child awaken?" she asked. "It's one of the most beautiful things in the world. Come on, I'll show you."

As they entered the bedroom, Erna began to stir, as if upon signal.

NLR's Ingram Scores 3rd Round Win

By WICK TEMPLE

LITTLE ROCK (AP)—North Little Rock's Sonny Ingram scored a third round technical knockout last night over Jim Gillard of New Orleans in a scheduled 10-round middleweight bout at War Memorial Stadium.

Ingram weighed 162 Gillard 160.

Gillard fought with a hard left hook to the right eye quickly swelled shut and refused after 2 1/2 of the third round.

It was the third victory in three starts for Ingram, billed as the "Golden Shiner Kid" by the Arkansas Boxing Assn. said he will fight highly-regarded Tony Dupree in August, probably in Little Rock.

Nixon Visit to Russia May Get Worse

By JAMES MARLOW

Associated Press News Analyst

WASHINGTON (AP)—Vice President Richard M. Nixon's good will Soviet visit has started off sticky and can get worse. If it does, President Eisenhower and the Senate will have to get themselves if their timing was bad.

Nixon, whose gladhanding Latin-American tour a year ago was met with spit and stones, got a shocking reception Thursday just about the time he landed in Moscow and started shaking hands with all in sight.

Twenty miles away Premier Nikita Khrushchev, angered by a recent anti-Communist gesture of Eisenhower and the Senate, was deriding the United States and calling Nixon's visit part of a plan to embarrass the Soviet Union.

On July 6 the Senate, by voice vote and with little debate, passed a resolution calling on Eisenhower to proclaim the third week in every July as Captive Nations Week. Eisenhower issued the proclamation July 17.

This was the latest of many similar American reminders that the Soviet Union was holding the satellites in thrall. It was supposed to serve several purposes:

To remind the satellite people the United States hasn't forgotten them; and to strengthen Secretary of State Christian A. Herter's hand in dealing with the Russians at Geneva on the Berlin question.

How this could strengthen Herter's hand is hard to see. A Senate resolution on an old theme wasn't going to make the Russians weak-kneed. It was nothing more than a gesture.

And, since this country isn't going to war to free the satellites and there is no visible likelihood of their getting freedom otherwise, the only immediate result could have been expected: it irritated the Russians.

So, since Nixon's Soviet visit is billed as a good will tour whose climax is interviews with Khrushchev, the judgment behind the timing of this resolution and proclamation is open to question.

For this reason: When Nixon landed in Moscow it was in the middle of the Captive Nations Week as proclaimed by Eisenhower.

Khrushchev, who had just returned to Moscow himself from a trip to Poland about an hour before Nixon's plane touched down, hastened to address a Polish friendship meeting 20 miles from the Moscow airport.

He was in a savage mood. Whether this was due only to the proclamation or was part of a deliberately get-tough-with-America campaign he seems to be building up is not clear. But the proclamation gave him a good excuse to strike at the United States just as Nixon arrived in the Soviet Union.

He told the crowd Nixon was a representative of the "pale stucken American imperialists" and said Nixon's trip was deliberately timed to coincide with a campaign against the Soviet Union.

The Senate and the Eisenhower administration both might have anticipated that—by letting Captive Nations Week coincide with the week of Nixon's arrival in Moscow—they might be giving the Russians a chance to embarrass him. And the Russians chose to react just that way.

Any of the year's 52 weeks could just as easily have been designated Captive Nations Week. Why then was the choice made of the very week that Nixon went to Russia?

The answer seems to be, not to deliberate timing.

The resolution was offered by Sen. Paul Douglas (D-Ill.) joined by Sen. James K. Davis (D-N.Y.)

This day night in the Senate Douglas was asked if the third week in July had been designated in the resolution so as to coincide with the arrival of Nixon in Moscow.

He said that the timing was coincidental. Originally, he said, the resolution called for the week after the Fourth of July.

This was changed, he said, after there was a delay in passing the resolution.

MAKING ROOM FOR MORE

This stark, angular structure is taking its place beside the stately concrete silos that have long been a landmark in the grain belt. It is a metal building recently constructed by the Missouri Farmers Association in Mexico, Mo. It was built to serve farmers storing grain under government loan and has room for 350,000 bushels. Storage of federal grain surpluses is now the number one business of private grain warehouses, under the watchful eye of the Commodity Credit Corporation. C-C to the government for storing grain during fiscal 1959 is estimated at 422 million dollars. It is expected to rise to 550 million in 1960.

TRAFFIC DEATHS CLIMB

Newsman gives state-by-state percentage change in motor-vehicle fatalities for the first four months of 1959 compared with the same period for the previous year. Fatalities increased 4 per cent for the country as a whole. State registering the biggest increase was Vermont, up 100 per cent. It was followed by New Hampshire, up 150 per cent, and Nevada, up 72 per cent.

END OF AN EYESORE

Slums in the very shadow of the Capitol Building have long been a national disgrace. Now one famous Washington eyesore, Dixon Court, has been leveled to the ground. A redevelopment project is replacing the decrepit buildings, above, with modern apartments and green spaces.

POWER that sustains may be found thru regular church attendance

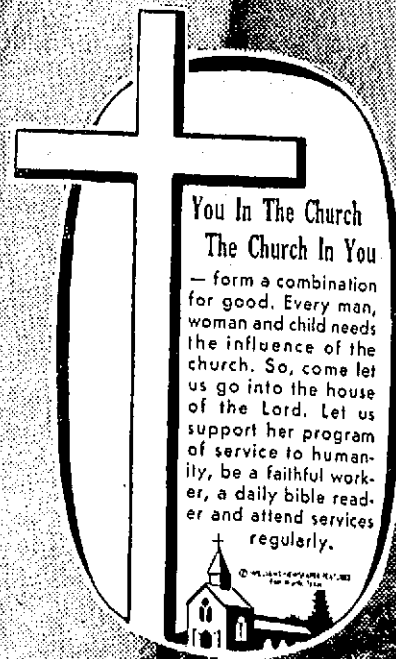

"LORD, HELP ME"

...she cried. But it was too late. A duty had been shirked... a responsibility neglected...a damage done. Grief is evident. She overlooked an opportunity and, a life was lost. Life? What is it?

St. James said, "Life is a vapor that appears only for a little while." Every worthwhile life spends its self serving others. Every good life has a vital glow...it lends meaning to many little deeds that is determined by a few great decisions. Then don't procrastinate. Don't have to repent in anguish for neglecting
God, His church or a friend. Be a faithful church-goer, a dependable community citizen, and a booster of all good things.
Then, whatsoever you ask in His name shall be given.
